“How The Internet Changed My Life” is a participatory documentary by Nicole Ruggiero, where you encounter the elusive entity of The Internet through personal stories. Presented in a large-scale installation, this exhibition includes mixed reality portraits, VR worlds, an AR face filter, and a retro website, sharing life changing moments with The Internet as active experiences. Nicole’s VR collaborators include artist and developer, Daniel Sabio (The Glad Scientist,) and music composer Dylan Banks. This exhibition was also shown previously during Art Basel at HeK Basel in Switzerland (2021) and at Kunsthalle Düsseldorf in Germany (2021).

“Upside Down World” by David Henry Nobody Jr. will consist of a physical installation ‘set’ of an upside down room, with furniture on the ceiling. The inverted room is a world turned upside down, our reality at a time of massive geo political changes and escalating war. A group of five newly made NFT performance art videos will be displayed, each showing ephemeral upside down performance moments and inverted visual illusions. The set is also intended as a dark playground for the phone, the audience can take pictures of themselves immersed in the Inverted reality.

A duo of NFT artists exploring identity constructs in the metaverse with VR, AR, Videos and IRL interactive elements in physical space.
